H.C.R. No. 32

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

1 WHEREAS, In 2018, the discovery of an unmarked burial ground
2 at the former Imperial State Prison Farm site in Sugar Land drew 3 national attention to an abhorrent chapter in history; and

4 WHEREAS, Archeologists at the site found the skeletal remains 5 of 95 victims of the convict leasing system, which was used after 6 the Civil War to replicate the oppression that existed under 7 slavery; although the 13th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution
8 prohibited involuntary servitude, it created an exemption for 9 people convicted of crimes; Southern states took advantage by 10 enacting "Black Codes," laws that applied only to African 11 Americans, who could be prosecuted criminally for such offenses as 12 loitering, breaking curfew, or not carrying proof of employment; 13 and

14 WHEREAS, Prisoners of the state were leased as cheap labor to 15 private railways, mines, and agricultural operations, including 16 the sugar plantations along the Brazos River; while receiving no 17 pay, convicts often endured conditions even more brutal than 18 slavery, given that contractors had no financial interest in their 19 well-being; more than 3,500 Texas prisoners died between 1866 and 20 1912, when the legislature outlawed convict leasing; and

21 WHEREAS, While the state and employers profited, the families
22 and communities of victims suffered damage that spanned 23 generations; a full understanding of the convict leasing system and 24 its aftereffects is vital to addressing issues that continue to

1 plague society today, including mass incarceration, convict labor,
2 prison privatization, and entrenched poverty; now, therefore, be it
