CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, In recent months, the Houston Police Department Crime Laboratory has come under intense public scrutiny by lawmakers, law enforcement and criminal justice officials, and the media, bringing to light a longstanding and disturbing pattern of irregularities in its handling of evidence in numerous criminal

WHEREAS, A state audit conducted last year by the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) found a number of serious shortcomings, including inadequately trained staff, failure to file standard scientific protocols, and tolerating for at least five years a leaking roof that could have led to evidence being contaminated with rainwater; the DPS audit determined that the lab's procedures for DNA analysis failed to meet accredited industry standards, including benchmarks established by the Federal Bureau of Investigation to ensure quality work at DNA laboratories; and

WHEREAS, Testifying before a hearing of the General Investigating Committee of the Texas House of Representatives, a DPS expert cited the Houston lab as among the worst that she had seen in nearly 20 years of auditing DNA labs worldwide; a former Harris County DNA analyst corroborated those allegations, saying that she had found at least one serious problem in each of 15 cases that she reviewed in the early to middle 1990s; and unique; indeed, one study found that defective and fraudulent science ranked fifth among the leading causes of wrongful conviction; what makes this particular situation particularly disturbing is the egregious nature of the defects and the extent to which these defects are likely to have contributed to a widespread miscarriage of justice; and

WHEREAS, More than 200 Harris County death penalty cases are currently under review because of the possibility of faulty evidence from the lab, and 32 persons convicted with questionable DNA evidence already have been executed; evidence used in more than 20 cases, including seven involving defendants now on death row, is now being retested because of problems with the Houston crime lab; and

WHEREAS, The Houston Police Department voluntarily closed the crime lab in January after the lab had failed the DPS audit, and the department has asked the National Forensic Science Technology Center to conduct a second audit to help determine whether the closure should become permanent; the police department also announced that it would conduct an internal affairs investigation into employee misconduct and policy violations at the lab; and

WHEREAS, The Harris County District Attorney's Office, responding to media attention on the situation, has undertaken an unprecedented review of all criminal cases in which evidence was processed by the crime lab; however, legislators have received indications that the district attorney's office had known for some time of the irregularities at the lab; and

WHEREAS, Given the gravity of the consequences for countless defendants in previous criminal trials whose fate rests with a proper review of their cases and the evidence presented therein, a self-investigation by the police department and a review by the district attorney's office are insufficient; the nature and quantity of irregularities that have been brought to light demand an outside, independent, and thorough review to ensure that justice is truly served; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the 78th Legislature of the State of Texas hereby respectfully urge the Congress of the United States to request that the U.S. Department of Justice conduct a thorough investigation into the irregularities found in the work of the Houston Police Department Crime Laboratory and that the department conduct a review of past criminal cases in which the outcome might have depended on evidence processed by the laboratory; and, be it further

RESOLVED, That the Texas secretary of state forward official copies of this resolution to the president of the United States, to the speaker of the house of representatives and the president of the senate of the United States Congress, and to all the members of the Texas delegation to the congress with the request that this resolution be officially entered in the Congressional Record as a memorial to the Congress of the United States of America.
