Fiscal Analysis

The bill would require the Interagency Council on Early Childhood Intervention (ECI), by rulemaking, to establish a system of payments by families of children receiving ECI services, including a schedule of sliding fees, in a manner consistent with federal requirements. The bill would take effect September 1, 2003.

ECI indicates that the bill would decrease ECI program costs. Under the provisions of the bill, local providers that contract with ECI would collect and keep the fees generated from implementing a schedule of sliding fees for ECI services. The annual contracts between ECI and the local providers would then be reduced by the amount of fees collected.

Methodology

The Interagency Council on Early Childhood Intervention (ECI) assumes that families, above 200% of the Federal Poverty Level (FPL), with children enrolled in the ECI program would pay a fee for ECI services. The agency assumes that each child enrolled in the ECI program would receive 3 hours per month of billable services. The agency also assumes that the average fee collected would be $10 per hour.

ECI estimates that the average number of children enrolled in the ECI program whose families are above 200% FPL would be 4,932 in fiscal year 2004 and 5,330 in fiscal year 2005. Based on an 8.3% growth rate, the agency projects that the average number of children enrolled in the ECI program whose families are above 200% FPL would be 5,772 in fiscal year 2006; 6,251 in fiscal year 2007; and 6,770 in fiscal year 2008. The agency estimates that local providers would collect $1,775,520 in fees in fiscal year 2004 and $1,918,800 in fees in fiscal year 2005.

Local Government Impact

According to the agency, there would be an increase in administrative cost for local ECI providers associated with collecting the new fees.
