

By: Miller

H.C.R. No. 30

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

1 WHEREAS, Though separated by thousands of miles, Texas and 2 Ireland are bound by strong ties of culture, history, and 3 sensibility, and nowhere is this fact more apparent than in the fine
4 community of Dublin, Texas, in Erath County; and

5 WHEREAS, The town's deep affinity with Ireland is hardly 6 limited to its sharing the name of that country's capital, for a
7 notable Irish influence has left its imprint on the history of this 8 attractive Texas community; and

9 WHEREAS, Just as Ireland is renowned as a center for equine 10 attractions, drawing visitors from far and wide to its races,
11 shows, and fairs, so Dublin has for many years been closely
12 associated with the distinctively American display of riding skill
13 known as the rodeo; serving as the home of the World Championship 14 Rodeo from 1940 to 1959, the community remains a significant site on 15 the rodeo map, with several championship title holders and trainers 16 living in the vicinity; and

17 WHEREAS, Much of Dublin's early prominence in the area was 18 due to several families of Irish Jews who settled there after 19 encountering discrimination in New England; these pioneers played 20 an instrumental role in the town's development as a regional trade 21 center; and

22 WHEREAS, Reminders of the community's namesake may be found
23 everywhere in Dublin: in street names such as Shamrock, Shannon,
24 and Belfast, in the Dublin High School colors of gold and Kelly

1 green, and in the city's flag, a white shamrock set against a 2 brilliant green background; and

3 WHEREAS, Dublin maintains cordial relations with the Irish
4 capital, for the two towns have been pleased to recognize one 5 another as sister cities and now exchange communications several 6 times a year; and

7 WHEREAS, For obvious reasons, St. Patrick's Day is a high
8 point of the Dublin, Texas, calendar, and visitors who happen
9 across the town's March festivities may be forgiven for thinking
10 that they had somehow been transported back to the Auld Sod, so 11 joyful and exuberant is the community's celebration; and

12 WHEREAS, Of all the features that unite this forward-looking 13 Texas city with that fabled land to the East, none is more readily 14 apparent than the great good cheer and infectious friendliness of 15 these outgoing Texans, who welcome friend and stranger alike with 16 hospitality as warm and sincere as any to be found on the Emerald 17 Isle; and

18 WHEREAS, The people of Dublin are rightly proud of their many 19 connections to their cousins across the Atlantic, and it is only 20 fitting that the clear stamp of Erin on their community be formally 21 recognized; now, therefore, be it

22 RESOLVED, That the 79th Legislature of the State of Texas
23 hereby designate Dublin as the official Irish Capital of Texas.