Fiscal Analysis

In November 2001, Texas voters passed a constitutional amendment to add Article VIII, Section 1-n to the Texas Constitution, thereby authorizing the Legislature to exempt from ad valorem taxation "goods in transit".

The proposed enabling legislation would provide an exemption for property acquired or imported into Texas, stored at a location in which the owner of the goods did not have a direct or indirect ownership interest, and transported to another location either inside or outside of the state within 175 days. The proposed bill would provide a local option procedure to continue taxing the property.

Methodology

It is not known how many jurisdictions might hold an election and vote to continue taxing covered items. For purposes of this analysis, it is assumed that all taxing jurisdictions would provide the exemption. The Comptroller's staff estimated this loss for fiscal year 2007. These amounts were trended upward to reflect losses for fiscal years 2008 to 2011.

Section 403.302 of the Government Code requires the Comptroller to conduct a property value study to determine the total taxable value for each school district. Total taxable value is an element in the state's school funding formula. Since the proposed exemption would not be included in the property value study calculation, no impact to the State is anticipated.

Local Government Impact

The impact to units of local government are shown in the above tables.
