Local Government Impact

The bill would amend Chapter 74 of the Government Code relating to the compensation of presiding judges of the nine administrative judicial regions. Currently, salaries range from $23,000 to $40,000 per year and are set biennially by the Texas Judicial Council for the nine presiding judges. The salary set by the Council is apportioned to each county based on the county's population and the salaries are paid through the county budget process. Under the bill, the salaries would range from $33,000 to $50,000 per year. Accordingly, the maximum increase in costs to counties under the bill would be a $10,000 salary increase for each of the nine presiding judges, or $90,000 per year beginning in fiscal year 2006.

The bill would take effect September 1, 2005.
