AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

The Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center-El Paso (center) is currently expanding into a full, four-year medical school. The University of Texas-El Paso has many programs related to allied health. Sharing biological and biomedical resources between these institutions as it relates to biomedical education, training, and research, may provide students a bridge from undergraduate to graduate work for life sciences.

As proposed, S.B. 649 allows the boards of regents for these institutions to enter into joint partnerships and to develop joint degree programs and joint research programs.
