AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

As the agency charged with preserving, maintaining, and restoring the State Capitol, and the General Land Office Building and their contents and grounds, the State Preservation Board (board) has an extensive collection of photos, videos, and archival records relating to these historic properties. In order to protect the integrity of these items, the board owns the copyright to them. Public interest in these items is high, as the board receives over one thousand requests for use of these images and documents annually.

In order to efficiently and cost-effectively fulfill these public demands, in 1991 the board developed a policy to allow the public to purchase copyright-protected images from the collection. Beginning in 1991, the board was in frequent contact with the Office of the Attorney General (OAG) regarding this purchasing policy and was always informed that the board was complying with relevant regulations. The board's most recent request for approval of its pricing policy was in 2003, at which time the OAG informed the board that Chapter 552 (Public Information), Government Code, did not preclude the board from taking steps to protect its copyright in images requested by the public. The board was further convinced of its authority to charge a fee for the public's use of its copyright-protected documents and images by the fact that other state agencies such as the Texas State Library and Archives Commission and the General Land Office also charge for photographs and documents from their historical collections. In February 2007, the board was informed by the Cost Rules Administrator in the Open Records Division of the OAG that persons requesting copyright-protected images can only be charged the nominal fee allowed by the Texas Public Information Act.

As proposed, S.B. 1732 allows the board to charge a fee commensurate to the costs of handling requests for copyright-protected images and documents, as well as preserving the integrity of those items. These handling costs include working with a photo lab for reproduction of prints, copying files, and packaging items for safe transport. The fees would not serve as a barrier to the public's access to the collection, as is evidenced by the fact that requests for images and documents from the collection have increased throughout the years during which the board has regularly charged fees for the public's use of its copyright-protected images and documents.
