Fiscal Analysis

The bill would amend the Labor Code to add surviving parents to the list of beneficiaries eligible for death benefits in workers' compensation cases. The bill would reduce the amount of death benefits paid into the Subsequent Injury Fund from 364 weeks to 260 weeks in no-beneficiary fatal injury cases where a surviving parent receives death benefits.

The bill would take effect September 1, 2007.

Methodology

Based on the analysis of the Texas Department of Insurance (TDI), it is assumed the bill would reduce the revenue to the Subsequent Injury Fund by approximately 29 percent each year. It is assumed a majority of claimants would have surviving parents.

Local Government Impact

No fiscal implication to units of local government is anticipated.
