Fiscal Analysis

The bill would amend Chapter 61 of the Government Code to require counties to pay prospective jurors who report for jury duty. The bill would take effect September 1, 2007.

Methodology

Current law only requires counties to make payments for jury duty or reimbursement of expenses to jurors; the bill would require these payments also be made to prospective jurors. The majority of counties, about 95 percent, are already paying prospective jurors who report for jury duty. Counties pay jurors $6 for the first day, and $40 each day thereafter, with the state reimbursing the counties $34 for each juror. The Judiciary Section of the Comptroller's Office would require an increased appropriation to reimburse the other 5 percent of counties as required by Section 61.015 of the Government Code.

Local Government Impact

In those counties in which payments are already made to prospective jurors, there would be no fiscal impact. The impact in counties in which prospective jurors are not currently paid would vary, depending on the number of prospective jurors reporting to a summons and the number of jurors responding to a court process for more than one day. The cost to the county after reimbursement from the state for the second day of attendance, would be $6 per prospective juror per day.
