2 sports fan with the passing of Walter Woodard on February 13, 2009, 3 at the age of 62; and

4 WHEREAS, Born to Jack and Lucy Woodard on November 30, 1946,
5 Walter Woodard went on to enroll in Pasadena public schools in 1958;
6 he attended San Jacinto Intermediate School and Pasadena High 7 School, and he graduated from Sam Rayburn High School in 1966; and

8 WHEREAS, Mr. Woodard became involved in Pasadena's local 9 sports scene when he served as the honorary coach of the 1973 Colt
10 League All-Star baseball team, which made it to the world
11 championship that year, and after that experience, he rarely missed 12 another game; an ardent supporter of local teams and a variety of 13 sports, Mr. Woodard could often be spotted on the sidelines at 14 baseball fields, high school gyms, and stadiums, shouting out calls 15 and reminding the players to tuck in their shirttails; he also 16 helped coaches decide what plays to use, and he traveled and 17 celebrated wins with many teams; his passion for sports made him an 18 icon in Pasadena, and he was highly regarded by generations of 19 athletes, coaches, and spectators for his loyalty and for making 20 sure everyone in the stands was involved and enjoying themselves at 21 all the sporting events; and

22 WHEREAS, This esteemed Texan was also known for his work with 23 the Muscular Dystrophy Association and for his participation in 24 city food drives and various community service organizations; Mr.

1 Woodard's unwavering support of local youth programs was recognized
2 by the City of Pasadena and the Pasadena Independent School
3 District in 2008, when he was named Pasadena Coach of the Year; in 4 addition, the mayor proclaimed Walter Woodard Day and renamed a
5 charity event, the Walter Woodard Toys for Tots Softball
6 Tournament, in his honor, and this spring, the Little League and 7 Pony teams will wear his initials on their sleeves; and

8 WHEREAS, A beloved citizen of Pasadena, Walter Woodard
9 touched the lives of countless area residents, and he leaves behind 10 a legacy that will forever be treasured by all those who were 11 fortunate enough to know him; now, therefore, be it
