Fiscal Analysis

The bill would amend Chapter 11 of the Tax Code to increase the amount of the residence homestead exemption from ad valorem taxation by a school district.

The bill would increase the residence homestead exemption for school districts from $15,000 to $30,000. The bill would also provide an adjustment to any age 65-and-over or disabled tax limitation on the property to reflect the increased exemption.

The bill would make conforming changes to school finance provisions. The bill would be effective January 1, 2010, contingent upon the adoption of a constitutional amendment HJR 41, 81st Legislature, Regular Session (2009).

Methodology

Some low-value residences are appraised at less than $30,000, so the entire amount of the new homestead exemption would not be absorbed. The gross amount of the additional homestead exemption was multiplied by an absorption factor to estimate the net value loss to the additional $15,000 exemption, including the loss to age 65-and-over or disabled tax ceiling reductions. The value loss was trended through the projection period, and trended school district tax rates were applied to estimate the cost of the exemption.

Because of the operation of the hold harmless provisions of HB 1, 79th Legislature, Third Called Session (2006), the portion of the cost related to school district compressed rates is transferred to the state. A portion of the school districts' debt and enrichment costs are also transferred to the state after a one-year lag because of the operation of the funding formulas. All costs were estimated over the five year projection period. There would be no losses to taxing units other than the state and school districts.

The bill is estimated to have an impact on the state aid districts receive based on the enrichment tier as tied to the yield of the Austin Independent School District (ISD). To the extent that the bill has the effect of lessening Austin ISD's revenue per weighted student per penny of tax effort, as determined by the Commissioner of Education, the growth of the equalized yield on those enrichment pennies would slow, resulting in slower growth in state aid.

Local Government Impact

The fiscal implication to school districts is reflected in the table above and is contingent upon passage of a constitutional amendment authorizing the exemption. The fiscal implication is also included in the fiscal note relating to the corresponding resolution. There would be no fiscal implication to taxing units other than the state and school districts.
