Fiscal Analysis

The bill would amend the Finance Code to limit the amount of interest charged on certain consumer loans to a maximum of 30 percent. Additionally, if the loan contract is prepaid in full, the lender would refund or credit the borrower for unearned interest charges the borrower has already paid. An administrative fee not to exceed $5 can be provided for deferred presentment transactions. A lender may charge a maximum fee of $15 for a returned check.

The bill would take effect September 1, 2009.

Methodology

The analysis is based on information provided by the Office of Consumer Credit Commissioner (OCCC) and includes the following assumptions:

The OCCC licenses approximately 2,600 small loan lenders. Based on information provided by OCCC, it is estimated that limiting the interest rate charged on a consumer loan to a maximum of 30 percent would cause a reduction in the licensee population which would reduce the need for FTE positions. It is assumed that the OCCC would reduce its number of FTEs by 15.0 each year, which would equate to a savings of $1.2 million each year. This includes salary, benefits, travel, operating expenses, and other costs for each FTE. Since the OCCC is a self-leveling agency and is statutorily required to generate revenues sufficient to cover all of the agency's direct and indirect costs, this analysis assumes the estimated savings would be offset by a similar reduction in revenues collected.

Local Government Impact

No fiscal implication to units of local government is anticipated.
