Austin, Texas

FISCAL NOTE, 81ST LEGISLATIVE REGULAR SESSION

Revision 1

April 29, 2009

TO: Honorable Rob Eissler, Chair, House Committee on Public Education

FROM: John S. O'Brien, Director, Legislative Budget Board

IN RE: HB3076 by Deshotel (Relating to a parenting and paternity awareness program used in the health curriculum for public schools.), As Introduced

No significant fiscal implication to the State is anticipated.

The bill would authorize the Texas Education Agency to evaluate locally developed or adopted programs and curriculum materials related to the parenting and paternity awareness curriculum requirement. Potential administrative costs to the state may occur if the number of programs and curriculum for evaluation is larger than anticipated.

Local Government Impact

No significant fiscal implication to units of local government is anticipated.

It is assumed that most school districts would use the curriculum provided by the Office of the Attorney General for inclusion in middle and junior high school health curriculum. School districts may incur costs if they developed their own materials or purchased materials to comply with the requirements, but it is assumed districts that elect to do so would be able to absorb any related costs.
