4 capacities, including that of executive director, and after 5 devoting almost 40 years to the dairy industry; and

6 WHEREAS, Mr. Cowan began his career in 1970, when he accepted
7 a position with an Associated Milk Producers truck facility in 8 Dublin, Texas; over the years, he rose from washing milk trucks and 9 tanks to assuming increasing levels of responsibility at different 10 cooperative locations, all the while advancing his knowledge of the 11 business through formal and informal education; and

12 WHEREAS, A longtime resident of Dublin, Mr. Cowan also played 13 an active civic role in that community during his years there; he 14 served as president of the Dublin school board and as a member of 15 the Dublin City Council, and in 1985 he was named Man of the Year; 16 and

17 WHEREAS, In 1990, he moved to Arlington to assume a new role
18 with the Associated Milk Producers, which later merged with other 19 cooperatives to form the Dairy Farmers of America; he subsequently 20 became executive director of the newly created Texas Association of 21 Dairymen, a post he held for eight years; and

22 WHEREAS, Mr. Cowan has additionally worked to advance the 23 interests of his field through his service on various boards and 24 committees and through his involvement with many organizations and

1 state agencies, including the Texas Critical Infrastructure
2 Advisory Group, the State Technical Committee of the Natural
3 Resources Conservation Service, and the United States Animal Health
4 Association; and

5 WHEREAS, This esteemed Texan has devoted countless hours to 6 advocating for and defending the rights of dairy farmers; his 7 contributions over the course of a distinguished career were 8 recognized in 2009 when the Texas Agricultural Cooperative Council 9 bestowed on him its highest honor, naming him Cooperator of the 10 Year; and

11 WHEREAS, John Cowan has been described by his peers as "a man
12 of extreme importance to agriculture" and as "a hardworking,
13 knowledgeable, honest and loyal representative [of] the industry";
14 now, therefore, be it
