Fiscal Analysis

The bill would require the Comptroller of Public Accounts (Comptroller) to conduct a study of the economic impact of the installation of the border wall near the Texas-Mexico border on the state, local governments, business, families, and individuals. The bill would require the Comptroller, in completing the study, focus on the effects of the installation of the wall on the businesses, families, and individuals who own or operate on land that falls between the international boundary and the border wall; and analyze each parcel of land that falls between the wall and international boundary and each business that operates on the land. The bill would require a state agency or local government to provide information and assistance for the study upon request by the Comptroller. The Comptroller would provide updates on the progress of the study as requested at interim committee hearings of the House Committee on Border and Intergovernmental Affairs and the Senate Committee on International Relations and Trade. The Comptroller would be required to submit the results of the study not later than December 1, 2012 to the Lieutenant Governor, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the presiding officers of the House Committee on Border and Intergovernmental Affairs and the Senate Committee on International Relations and Trade. The bill would expire January 1, 2013.

Methodology

According to analysis by the Comptroller's office, the costs of conducting a study on the economic impact of the Texas-Mexico border wall are anticipated to be $556,000. Costs would include a contract for analysis, on-site inspections and interviews. In addition, the agency would leverage additional external resources such as university-based experts, surveys, and other analytical processes into the final report.

In fiscal year 2012, the project would include costs for multiple visits to the border area, primarily analysis, as well as assistance from outside entities in coordinating and calculating property assessments and surveys of local property and business owners. The study would conclude in fiscal year 2013 with follow-up visits and interviews and finalization of the report.

Local Government Impact

No significant fiscal implication to units of local government is anticipated.
