AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

The Texas Department of Banking (TDB) regulates state-chartered banks and trust companies. This bill addresses several concerns about trust companies operating in Texas.

The current statute establishes $500,000 in restricted capital as the threshold for determining whether a trust company is solvent. This definition does not adequately cover trust companies that administer large amounts of fiduciary assets and are required to maintain restricted capital above the statutory minimum. Current law also does not accommodate exempt trust companies that have been allowed to maintain less than $500,000 in restricted capital. S.B. 875 addresses this by defining insolvency as a function (50 percent) of restricted capital.

Trust companies are required to maintain at least 40 percent of restricted capital in liquid investments. A higher threshold is needed because in the case of insolvency, higher liquidity is crucial to efficiently winding down operations, and if too much time is required to convert illiquid assets into cash, account holders could be further harmed. S.B. 875 raises to 50 percent the amount of restricted capital that must be maintained in liquid investments.

Trust companies are examined by TDB annually. TDB should have discretion to examine trust companies more or less frequently, depending on the current need to protect the interests of account holders. S.B. 875 mirrors the provision concerning examination schedules for banks.

Currently, $1 million in restricted capital is required to form a new trust company. Trust companies with exempt status have no current minimum restricted capital requirements. Higher minimum restricted capital amounts ($2 million for new charters, $250,000 for those with exempt status) are needed to ensure that sufficient funds are available in case of unexpected operating losses and providing reasonable means for liquidation should recapitalization not be possible.

Under current law, trust companies may apply for exempt status if they serve only family members within the fourth degree. A broader reach (seven degrees of a common ancestor) and more specific definitions are needed to address increased life expectancies and more complex family relationships (e.g., former spouses, stepchildren, foster children). S.B. 875 addresses these concerns, and grants the Finance Commission of Texas rulemaking authority to further define these terms if necessary.

Other changes are needed to simplify or strengthen other statutes concerning trust companies with exempt status. S.B. 875 will make confidential statements of condition and income; streamline the dates that annual certifications are required to be filed with TDB; and clarify the requirements for maintaining exempt status upon change of control.

As proposed, S.B. 875 amends current law relating to the regulation of state trust companies.
