TEXAS COMMISSION ON ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY

Protecting Texas by Reducing and Preventing Pollution

March 22, 2019

The Honorable Dan Patrick
Lieutenant Governor of Texas
Capitol Station
PO Box 12068
Austin, Texas 78711

Re: Responsibility of the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ) Pursuant to Article XVI, Section 59(d), Texas Constitution.

Senate Bill (SB) 528, as Filed by Senator Kel Seliger-relating to the limitation on the maintenance and operation tax of the North Plains Groundwater Conservation District.

Dear Governor Patrick:

The following comments are provided pursuant to the Constitutional requirements referenced above. Under those requirements, the TCEQ must submit, to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Speaker of the House of Representatives, the TCEQ's recommendations on specific legislation affecting water districts. We recommend that these comments be considered in the evaluation of the proposed legislation.

The bill provides changes to the North Plains Groundwater Conservation District (GCD), Chapter §8887, Special District Local Laws Code. The bill removes Section §8887.151, that provided a maximum ad valorem taxation rate of five cents on each $100 of assessed valuation on property in the district that was subject to taxation for operations and maintenance expenses. The district continues to retain all rights, powers, privileges and duties provided by the Texas Water Code, Chapter 36, including the authority to levy an ad valorem tax.

Sincerely,

Kim Nygren, Director
Water Availability Division

cc: The Honorable Charles Perry, Chairman, Senate Committee on Water and Rural Affairs
Senator Kel Seliger, Texas Senate

Running reported to board members about ongoing projects of the DEDC and prospects for new and expanding businesses. He said that he has continued to be in contact with someone interested in bringing a craft brewery to Dumas. One of the sticking points has been Texas' long dealing with the regulation, licensing, and distribution of alcoholic beverages. Texas is the last state in the nation that requires small, craft brewers to go through separate distributors to sell their product, something that brewers and the Texas Craft Brewers Guild, a lobbying association, say increases the cost of craft beer and unfairly limits their ability to expand their businesses.

Current law allows those who brew less than 223,000 barrels annually to sell up to 5,000 barrels by the glass on brewery premises. While brewers can sell beer in those so-called "tasting rooms," they cannot sell beer from the brewery for customers to take home. They have to go through distributors for that.

House Bill 672 and Senate Bill 312 were recently filed in the 86th Texas Legislature. Both bills would allow craft brewers to sell up to 5,000 barrels on the brewery premises either by the glass or to take home, something the guild says would set craft brewers "on a more equal playing field with other Texas alcoholic beverage producers." Wineries, distillers, and so-called brew pubs already have the right to sell their products without having to go through distributors. Running said he was supporting both bills as a means of encouraging the development of craft breweries in Texas, and he hopes, encouraging the brewery he has been in discussions with to locate in Dumas.

Since the end of prohibition in 1933, Texas has had a so-called "three-tiered system" of alcohol distribution, whereby the producers of alcoholic beverages have to go through independent distributors to sell their products in retail outlets. Keeping brewers, distributors, and retail outlets separate was supposed to prevent the rise of huge brewers with the power to dominate all phases of the market, but the Texas Craft

Brewers Guild maintains that the system has evolved to give large distributors who have plenty of cash for lobbying, regional monopolies.

Josh Hare, a craft brewer and Board Chair of Texas Craft Brewers Guild, summed up the position of the guild in various testimonials submitted to the Texas Sunshine Commission. "Without the Texas tiered system, it's possible to imagine a dark and colorful world where Budweiser is the only beer available to Texas consumers, because Budweiser has been allowed to purchase every bar and retailer in the state. In that way, I suppose it's fair to argue that without the three-tiered system, there theoretically could have been no craft beer in Texas at all. That's why I want to make it absolutely clear today that our issue isn't with TABC (Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission) itself or even with the three-tiered system itself, it's with the decades of legislative efforts that have been made by certain interests to game that system at the expense of Texas consumers - persisting in from a safeguard against monopolies in a safeguard against competition."

Another topic Running touched on was Junior Achievement in Dumas this spring. He said that Theresa Hillman, Executive Director of Junior Achievement, has been actively seeking funding to enable Junior Achievement volunteers to provide instruction on practical business topics in Dumas High School business and economics classes during the spring semester.

As reported in the Sep. 29, 2018 edition of the Moore County News-Times, Junior Achievement volunteers spend one hour per week for six weeks giving students some of the business and financial skills they will need in life. The volunteers come mostly from the business and professional community, and they are able to develop relationships with the students and give them a taste of the world beyond high school - things like insurance, budgets, and investments, among others. The program is dependent on donations for funding. Running said it is a "fantastic program," and the DEDC has been one of its benefactors. Those interested in donating to support the spring semester of instruction can call 806-353-0045.

Rojas, a native of Dumas, Texas, enlisted in the Navy as a Hospital Cookmate in June 1996. After graduating from Wayland Baptist University in 1996 with a Bachelor of Science degree, he attended Officer Candidate School in Pensacola, Florida, and commissioned in November 1997. Prior to assuming command, he served as the Director, Joint Special Operations Command, Countering Weapons of Mass Destruction Coordination Cell.

During his speech Rojas thanked his wife and children, the military families that support the EOD community, commanders of EOD groups past and present, the many senior enlisted members who have guided him over the years, and the Sailors of EODGRU.

"You, the warfighters, are our nation's greatest weapon system. In my world, nothing is more important than you. It is my job to work for you in order for you to win every time you go into harm's way," said Rojas. "I am very proud of my enlisted roots. I have not forgotten that it is Sailors that make the world's greatest nuclear power Navy successful. By us working together we will create the most lethal, resilient, and mission ready Navy EOD and diving force in the world!"

Rear Adm Brian Bralke, commander, Navy Expeditionary Combat Command, provided the keynote speech for the change of command ceremony. He said, "Today, we have the opportunity to reflect on the leadership that enabled this command to thrive and operate at the highest levels of performance. Commanding EODGRU is a big job and for more than two years, Capt. Mariano has provided direction, mentorship and guidance to the more than 1,200 men and women who serve as part of this team."

Mariano received command of EODGRU in October 2016 and managed, trained, and equipped 1,200-person force. His Sailors trained and operated in support of Navy, Joint, and multi-national missions within the Northern, Indo-Pacific, Africa, Southern, and Central Command areas of responsibility.

During his tenure, the Navy EOD and Navy Dive commandates operated in support of Navy Special Warfare and Joint Special Operations forces, salvaging damaged aircraft, downing and destroying types of U.S. Navy ships following collisions, working with the Defense Prisoners of War/Missing in Action Accounting Agency, and supplying reconstruction chamber teams in support of carrier deployments to mitigate the risks of physiological operations, including hypoxia and decompression sickness in aviation.

U.S. Navy EOD is the world's premier combat force for conducting explosive hazards and conducting specialized diving and salvage. EODGRU is responsible for training, training, and equipping seven subordinate units.
