IN RE: HB496 by Gervin-Hawkins (Relating to traumatic injury response protocol and the use of bleeding control stations in public schools.), Conference Committee Report

No significant fiscal implication to the State is anticipated.

It is assumed that the provisions of the bill relating to the placement of bleeding control stations in public schools and to required training of public school personnel and students could be absorbed using existing resources.

Local Government Impact

The bill would require school districts and charter schools to purchase certain equipment for bleeding control stations and to train certain students and staff on the use of the stations. Costs would vary by district or school based on the number of items included in each bleeding control station as determined by the superintendent or school director and the number of bleeding control stations per campus.
