AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

Over 30 million people in the United States suffer from an eating disorder. Ninety-five percent of those with eating disorders are between the ages of 12 and 25, including almost one million under the age of 18. Within the last decade the trend has only worsened, with a 119 percent increase in the number of children under 12 admitted to a hospital for an eating disorder. Additionally, preliminary research conducted during the pandemic indicates that the stay-at-home orders due to COVID-19 have significantly exacerbated symptoms of eating disorder illnesses across the country and will have long-term implications.

The impact of eating disorders is catastrophic, with a higher mortality rate than all other mental illnesses combined. One person dies from an eating disorder every 62 minutes and those who suffer from this condition are 12 times more likely to commit suicide.

While eating disorders are life-threatening mental illnesses, they are treatable; patients recover at high rates if intervention is early and intensive. Unfortunately, more than 70 percent of those who suffer from eating disorders will not seek treatment due to stigma, misperceptions, lack of education, and access to care. Enhanced investigative and research efforts can improve eating disorder prevention and inform the development of strategies to address the needs of populations living with eating disorder illnesses.

S.B. 184 seeks to address this issue by directing the Department of State Health Services (DSHS), in collaboration with the Health and Human Services Commission, to study and prepare a report on the prevalence of eating disorders in Texas. The study will provide an overview of state-funded treatment options and recommend legislative action. DSHS will also have the authority to accept gifts and grants to fund expenses incurred by the study.
