AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

The proliferation of personal information publicly available on the internet leaves federal marshals, United States attorneys, and their families susceptible to criminal retaliation. Current law protects federal and state judges from the public disclosure of certain personal information (e.g., home addresses and phone numbers), but this protection does not extend to federal marshals, United States attorneys, their families, or the families of state and federal judges. This is problematic because when it comes to criminal danger and the accessibility of personal information, these public servants are just as susceptible to threats as federal and state judges. Each of the aforementioned categories require close interaction with criminals such that criminal vengeance or misguided anger at the justice system could detrimentally impact the safety of those who have merely taken a vow to uphold the law, as well as their families.

In the interest of protecting these public servants and their families from criminals, drug cartels, prison gangs, and others who may wish to do them harm, the personal information of federal marshals, United States attorneys, their families, and the families of state and federal judges should not be accessible to the general public, just as it is not available for state and federal judges. S.B. 1134 seeks to mend this oversight in current law by prohibiting the disclosure of certain personal information for these public servants. This legislation is expected to garner support from the family members of federal agents, United States attorneys, state judges, and federal judges, as well as interest groups that represent prosecutors and law enforcement officers. Given the fact that this bill merely furthers the same purpose proliferated under current law (i.e., protecting public servants from the dangers of the job), it is unlikely to be opposed.

As proposed, S.B. 1134 amends current law relating to address confidentiality on certain documents for certain federal officials and family members of certain federal officials or federal or state court judges.
