Fiscal Analysis

The bill would amend Section 201.943 of the Transportation Code, relating to the issuance of Texas Mobility Fund (TMF) bonds, to repeal Section 201.943(1) which specifies that the Transportation Commission (TTC) may not issue TMF obligations after January 1, 2015, except to refund outstanding obligations to provide savings to the state and to refund outstanding variable rate obligations and renew or replace credit agreements.

The bill would take effect immediately upon receiving a vote of two-thirds of all members elected to each house or otherwise on September 1, 2021.

Methodology

The bill would remove the statutory prohibition on the issuance of new TMF obligations under Section 49-k, Article III, Texas Constitution, and Section 201.943 of the Transportation Code, for the purpose of providing financing for transportation projects.

Based on the information provided by the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT), it is assumed current revenue estimates for the Texas Mobility Fund and market interest rates would enable the TTC to issue as much as $3.0 billion in new bond proceeds to provide financing for transportation projects. Based on analysis provided by TxDOT, it is assumed that $1.5 billion new TMF obligations would be issued in fiscal year 2022, with a final maturity date in 2045 (23 years), and $1.5 billion would be issued in fiscal year 2024, with a final maturity date in 2042 (18 years), with an aggregate interest rate of 3.2 percent. Issuance of the obligations would result in revenue gains to the Texas Mobility Fund from the receipt of bond proceeds in fiscal years 2022 and 2024. Debt service payments on the new TMF obligations which would begin in fiscal year 2023 at a cost of $40.0 million to the Texas Mobility Fund 365, with debt service payments and costs to Fund 365 continuing through fiscal year 2045. TxDOT estimates total repayment over the life of the bonds would be $4.5 billion from Fund 365.

Local Government Impact

No fiscal implication to units of local government is anticipated.
