Fiscal Analysis

The bill would amend the Government Code as it relates to female inmates' access to certain programs at the Texas Department of Criminal Justice (TDCJ) correctional facilities. According to TDCJ, the bill would expand certain contracts related to vocational and educational classes, life skills training, and substance use treatment and would have an estimated fiscal impact of approximately $2,700,000 per fiscal year.

Methodology

TDCJ conducted an assessment to determine which types of programs were needed at female correctional facilities. The programming costs were estimated using the current contracted rates and applied to an estimated population for these programming services. TDCJ estimated the service population at approximately 20 percent of capacity for female correctional facilities. The estimated fiscal impact is $0.3 million for educational and vocational programs, $1.5 million for substance use treatment, $0.6 million for cognitive therapy, and $0.3 million for life skills training.

This analysis assumes implementing the provisions of the bill would not result in a significant impact on state correctional populations or on the demand for state correctional resources.

Local Government Impact

No fiscal implication to units of local government is anticipated.
