Local schools have long been referred to as "community schools," because the community, particularly the parents of local school children, are an integral part of the school experience. In recent years, many parents have become less trusting of school districts and charter schools because they do not feel as if they have been granted appropriate opportunities to direct their children's educational experience. The Parents Bill of Rights, Senate Bill 8, seeks to provide a course correction to put parents back in the center of the community of the school.

Research has demonstrated that parental involvement in their child's education is one of the key contributing factors for academic success. Senate Bill 8 ensures parents remain a central component of a child's education by clearly enumerating their rights to direct the moral and religious training of their children in the Education Code and empowering them with the tools to stay aware and involved.

Senate Bill 8 includes several revisions to the school district grievance process such as clear timelines to reduce delays and ensure the concerns of parents are addressed in a fair and timely manner. If a school board is unable to satisfactorily resolve a parental grievance, an independent hearing examiner may be appointed to ensure concerns are fairly addressed at the local level.

School districts are prohibited from withholding information from children's parents, and are required to receive parental consent for the administration of any medical, psychiatric, and psychological treatments or tests. Parents are also given the right to request reviews of instructional material to verify lesson content is age-appropriate and on-grade-level. Instruction concerning sexual orientation and gender identity is prohibited at all grade levels.

Parents have the right to choose the educational setting of their children. As such, Senate Bill 8 gives parents the ability to exercise their freedom of educational choice by allowing free transfer between school districts as well as giving public school students the opportunity to attend private school with an Education Savings Account (ESA).

Senate Bill 8's ESA program provides families who leave the public school system or are enrolling in prekindergarten or kindergarten for the first time with $8,000 to be spent on tuition and fees at an accredited private school and other approved educational expenses such as textbooks, uniforms, tutoring, transportation, and academic assessment fees. Various safeguards are put in place for the responsible use of funds and prevent fraud, including random audits of ESAs.

Senate Bill 8's ESA program is not designed to harm public schools. No funds allocated for public schools are to be used for the ESA program, which is funded through general revenue. School districts with fewer than 20,000 students will receive $10,000 for two years for each student that leaves the district for the ESA program.

As proposed, S.B. 8 amends current law relating to public education, including parental rights and public school responsibilities regarding instructional materials and the establishment of an education savings account program.
