AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

Currently, during elections a number of violations of the Texas Election Code are committed and there is no enforcement activity. This lack of enforcement is due to a number of reasons, however, largely due to the lack of Election Code knowledgeable law enforcement personnel. Across the state there have been instances of candidates loitering within the 100 foot mark to greet voters and some have even created a rally to force the alternate judge to leave the poll; poll watchers are prevented from viewing activity that they are entitled to view; election administrators are not providing necessary information; postal workers are holding mail ballots; poll watchers are observing how voters are voting and reporting it to the voters' employers; and intimidation of nursing residents.

Election violations are sporadically reported to the secretary of state (SOS), who contacts the alleged violator in an attempt to stop the violation. However, SOS does not have any law enforcement personnel to investigate violations. Typically, the only recourse for SOS is to send a strongly worded e-mail or turn the irregular activity over to the attorney general. The irregular activity is noted and maintained to be used in an election contest, but very little action is taken against the violator of the Election Code. Election contests only occur when the race is close, even though there may have been egregious violations of the code. There is very little to discourage violators from repeating the same bad behavior again and again.

S.B. 220 would provide an avenue for SOS to immediately address election violations as they are occurring. The bill provides for an election marshal appointed by SOS from the Department of Public Safety of the State of Texas. This election marshal would ensure that election marshals are trained and ready to respond to election violations across the state in an expeditious manner.

Not only would S.B. 220 provide for an election marshal, it would also provide for emergency judges to be able to hear cases within three hours of reporting during early voting and within one hour during election day. These judges would be appointed by the eleven (11) regional administrative law judges across the state.

Additionally, S.B. 220 provides a cause of action to enjoin a party from continuing the alleged violation behavior.
