Fiscal Analysis

The bill would allow parents of students with significant cognitive disabilities to request exemption from the administration of an alternative assessment with approval from the admission, review, and dismissal committee.

The bill would require the commissioner, in consultation with stakeholders, to develop an alternative assessment method that includes progress on the goals identified in the student's individualized education plan.

The bill would also define a specialized support campus and require the commissioner to establish accountability guidelines in developing an alternative accountability plan in collaboration with stakeholders.

The bill would require that the commissioner determine, report, and consider the performance of students enrolled at the campus using the approved plan, and to report on effectiveness.

Methodology

According to the Texas Education Agency, the development of an alternative assessment method required by the bill would require $1,687,263 in funding in each fiscal year. The agency's estimate assumes that the bill would require the Commissioner, in consultation with stakeholders, to establish accountability guidelines in developing an alternative accountability plan for specialized support campuses. The agency estimates the cost of the Specialized Campus Accountability Council at $97,720 in fiscal year 2024, including for the cost of travel, lodging, meeting room rentals, and supplies.

The agency estimates that 3.0 FTEs would be required in the 2024–25 biennium to implement the bill, and that these 3.0 FTEs would continue in subsequent years. These positions, an education specialist, programmer, and director, would support elements of the bill including performance monitoring, reporting, planning, and development of guidelines. The total cost for these positions, including salaries and wages, benefits, payroll contributions, and operating expenses, is $367,875 for fiscal year 2024 and $370,345 for subsequent fiscal years.

Technology

No fiscal implication to technology is anticipated.

Local Government Impact

This bill would require districts to submit alternative assessment results for use in accountability. The bill would also require the commissioner to adopt appropriate guidelines for specialized support campus alternative accountability plans. The alternative accountability plans could mean additional data collections, which could come at a cost for the campuses and districts.
