This bill is another example of applying a social services model in a situation where consequences should be in place. It does not matter what county we are talking about. Why are we even allowing a child with a criminal record to attend a public school? Keep the kids who have a rap sheet out of the classroom and off the main campus.

This is a pilot program social experiment restricted to the counties in the extreme southern tip of Texas. This bill would expand the role of schools to function as reform institutions, infringe upon the role of parents, deviate from the primary mission of education, and invite more progressive ideology into our schools. This bill also solicits gifts or donations from "any source," which is essentially inviting corruption.
